Tackle MCQs

Tactic #1

» OUT OF TIME?

If you are running out of time and can't complete all the multiple-choice questions, take a best guess and answer them.

Never leave a multiple-choice question unanswered. You'll have a 25% chance of getting it right.

Tactic #2

» FINISHED EARLY?

If you finish before the 3 hours are up in the MCQ section, you can either review your answers or move straight to the essay section.

If you do the latter, the extra time will be added to the essay section, but you won't be able to come back to the MCQ section. So make sure you're confident in your MCQ answers before proceeding to the Essay section.

Tactic #3

» JUMP AROUND

You can skip questions in this section with the ability to come back to them before going into the essay portion of the exam.

Answer all the questions that are easy first, flag the ones you skipped, and come back to the tough ones when all the easy ones have been answered.

All 100 questions in the MCQ section have the same score weight so answer all the easy ones first, leave the hard ones for last. This strategy will help you finish your exam fast!

Important: If you move to the essay section leaving MCQs unanswered, you won't be able to come back to the MCQ section.

Tackle Essays

Tactic #1

» ASSESS FIRST

First, scroll between questions and scenarios within the essay section. This will help you assess how much time you'll need for each essay question.

Then, start to choose the essay you're most comfortable with or choose the one you think it'll take the least amount of time to complete.

Tactic #2

» CHECK VERBS

COMPARE • CONTRAST • ANALYZE • APPLY •
EXPLORE • INTERPRET • EXAMINE

Pay close attention to verbs. If it says compare and contrast, don't spend your time defining something. Only do what is asked on the question.

Use the same verbs from a question in your answers. Adding more information than necessary will eat up your time leaving less time for the other essay.

Tactic #3

» OUT OF TIME?

Don't leave questions blank. If short on time, at least write an outline of your main points. Graders are looking to give you points, not take them away. Make it easy for them to give you points by showing your work.

Tactic #4

» READ QUESTIONS FIRST

Most candidates read an entire essay first before reading the questions within the essay. A faster approach is by reading the questions first, then reading the entire essay.

By doing so it will help you scan for relevant information in the essay and discard anything that's not relevant quicker.

Read the entire question to understand all requirements. Skimming through a question is not enough. Read all of it before formulating your answers.

Tactic #5

» PROPER ENGLISH

Answer each question in a clear and concise manner. Make sure that you use standard English and write in a logical manner. Focus on organization, clarity and punctuation. Graders are looking for effective writing skills.

If you finish the essay section before time runs out, use that time to polish your writing and sentence structure.

Tactic #6

» BE BRIEF

Be brief and to the point in your answers. Adding fluff that's not relevant to the question at hand will take time away from solving other questions.

Bullet points are OK, but be sure to use all the time available to you. Always show your work on the screen. All the scratch paper used will be thrown out after you leave the testing center.

The 5 Best Strategies To Prepare For Your CMA Exam Day

All of your hard work to prepare for the CMA exam will, at some point, lead to CMA exam day.

Through it all, you have to be on your game: focused, determined, and persevering.

You've sought out the best CMA exam prep and stuck with it to the end of the road.

You've taken a practice test and come to realize that you're ready.

Because once you book your CMA exam, the clock begins.

As it gets ever close to test day, it's important that you don't blow it in the final mile. This home stretch has a strategy of its own, and I want to walk you through it.

I'm going to break down a number of strategies to help you remain calm and collected the night before the exam, the day of the exam and the time in between.

And so, with that in mind, let's dive into what to do to prepare for CMA exam day.

Leading Up to the CMA Exam

In the very last days before your test, there are a few areas of priority that should command your attention.

I recommend you focus on two test-related areas:

- Taking plenty of CMA practice tests
- Memorizing CMA exam formulas

Practice makes perfect, and this is something you really can do up until the 11th hour. Continue to practice areas you've found challenging. CMA sample questions and practice exams are invaluable for putting in the work during those final couple of weeks and days.

Secondarily, don't skimp on formula coverage. It's going to be a make-it-or-break-it component for your test performance. Go over formulas — preferably with a good formula guide — again and again to memorize as much as possible.

» Prometric Test Drive

Prometric is the organization that facilitates the CMA exam. They've recently started letting CMA exam candidates take an official practice test as an in-person experience in a Prometric exam center.

This is easily the best way to get a "test day" vibe before you actually take the CMA exam.

If you tend to have test anxiety, haven't taken many long exams like this, or haven't tested in an official center before, you should definitely consider the Prometric Test Drive.

» The Night Before the CMA Exam

Tomorrow's the big day – you've got one more sleep until the CMA exam.

What should you do with it?

First, let's talk about what not to do.

DON'T: Cram

That's really the entire piece of advice – don't cram.

You've already practiced. You've already reviewed as much as you can. You've already completed the test drive.

Now it's time to put the books away.

DON'T: Eat Or Drink Too Much

It's not time for party mode... yet.

There are all kinds of expert-recommended nutrition tips to boost mental clarity and energy during a test. But a good rule of thumb is just to not overdo it – don't eat too much or drink alcohol the night before your CMA exam.

Excess food or liquid consumption could impact your sleep that night, not to mention your digestion the next day, so try to keep it light.

And avoid any alcohol as it can definitely affect sleep and your ability to perform well on the exam.

DON'T: Overthink or Worry

Yes, exams are stressful – especially ones with stakes as high as the CMA exam. It's easy to start worrying about what might happen if you fail or suddenly forget everything you've learned.

Let me remind you: at this point in the game, you've studied hard. You've focused. You've sacrificed. As long as you trust your resources and put in the time, you'll be ready.

Worry won't change the outcome.

DO: Rest

I'm a big fan of mindfulness in all aspects of life, but I cannot stress enough how important it is to be in the right headspace on the day of the CMA exam.

This will not happen by accident. You have to set your intentions and begin to tune into your thought patterns.

It's important to understand your optimal mental acuity windows, but also to be able to channel your focus. Remember, you're about to head into four hours of testing – it's essential that you don't go in with an overtaxed brain.

This means that the simple tip for preparing for the CMA exam day mentally is: rest and take it easy.

Go for walks. See some friends. Watch your favorite show.

You've spent months going through your CMA exam study plan, so let your conscious mind rest and your subconscious take over.

DO: Pack

If you're doing an in-person test, use the night before your test to get all of your test paraphernalia together.

Lay out what you'll wear. Pack your bag with everything you're planning to take for your locker and into the test.

"I am glad to have passed the exam at my first attempt, it was a mix of devotion, good support, and a positive mindset. Thank you to the CMA Exam Academy team"

-HUGO CHARLES, CMA CANDIDATE

DO: Clear Your Mind

Almost everyone is going to have exam day nerves.

It's easy to tell yourself to not worry or overthink, but that's easier said than done.

There are many ways to clear your mind so you can go into the exam calm and ready to succeed.

How you manage anxiety and nervous thoughts will vary based on your personality. Think back to a time when you felt worried. How did you manage those emotions?

The answer is different for everyone. Some candidates meditate. Some do manifestation exercises. Some spend quality time with their friends and family. Some eat a great meal or take a walk outdoors.

The good news is that learning to calm nerves is a lateral skill you'll carry into your career. Board meetings? No problem. Salary negotiations? You'll handle it. Take time to find what works for you, then practice being calm.

"I really enjoyed the CMA Exam Academy while preparing for Part 1. The CMA Exam Academy team was very helpful in helping me reach my goal. "

-MITCHELL MCCARTY, CMA

DO: Spend Time With People Who Make You Feel Good

Before your exam, you may notice some feelings of self-doubt creeping up on you. As a remedy, I recommend spending time with people who bring out the best in you.

Studies have shown a correlation between social relationships and positive mental health.

So, if your mom is your biggest fan, give her a call. If your spouse gives great pep talks, now's the perfect time to ask for one.

Surrounding yourself with supporters will go a long way to putting yourself at ease.

"Thank you so much to CMA Exam Academy that helped me clear the CMA Exam Part 1 in my first attempt! Kudos to Nathan and the whole team!"

-APRILLE ROSE DIONISIO, CMA CANDIDATE

» The Day of the CMA Exam

If you've kept to your study regimen and put in the work, you shouldn't wake up on exam day in a major panic. You've put in the effort and you're well rested; now you just need to focus on the day ahead.

How to Start Your CMA Exam Day

Here are my general tips for getting a good start to your day:

Wake Up Early

Give yourself a longer-than-average time to go through your typical morning routine; you want plenty of time in case something unexpected happens.

This doesn't mean you should alter your sleep schedule too drastically. A main priority should be to get a minimum of 8 hours of sleep. If your test is scheduled early in the morning, it's a good idea to gradually adjust your sleep schedule if you don't already wake up early.

The idea is to be as comfortable and awake as possible on the day of your exam. This means getting up early enough that you don't feel rushed but ensuring that you're not exhausted from an unexpected shift in routine.

Dress Comfortably

You don't need to dress to impress. No one at the Prometric test center has anything to do with your CMA exam score, so don't dress like you're going to a job interview. Wear whatever makes you feel comfortable and focused.

A comfortable pair of pants, a nice cotton t-shirt, your lucky socks, and sneakers will be more comfortable than a crisp button-up and dress shoes. Pick clothes that will limit your distractions instead of focusing on leaving an impression.

Wear Layers

While on the topic of clothes, be sure to wear layers.

Testing centers can be too cold for comfort, which can impact test-taking. You will not be able to leave your seat to get a sweater from your locker during the test, so wear a sweater or jacket to the testing room. This way you can remove a layer if you're too warm.

Caffeinate As Usual

Follow your normal caffeine routine. This means if you don't normally drink caffeine, now is not the time to start.

If you already drink a cup of joe in the morning, carry on. Caffeine can have a major impact on your cognitive abilities. The studies show mixed findings in some cases, but many have found that it can improve working memory and reaction time.

On the other hand, if you're not used to caffeine, high doses can increase your anxiety. You know your body best, so proceed as usual.

Fuel Your Brain

Eat a solid breakfast. Your brain needs nutrients and energy to perform optimally.

Some great foods for cognitive performance include leafy green vegetables, fatty fish, berries, and walnuts. So a spinach omelet would be a great option for breakfast. You could also have oatmeal with berries and walnuts, or a spinach and kale salad with grilled salmon on top.

"You can't go wrong with CMA Exam Academy. Everything you need to know for the exam is presented in an attractive and easy-to-use format. I recommend CMA Exam Academy without reservation."

-BRIAN BENNETT, CMA CANDIDATE

Leave Ahead Of Schedule

If you're going to an in-person CMA test, leave with plenty of time to arrive. You'll have tested the route, but may not have accounted for time of day traffic. Plus, unexpected things happen on the road every day.

Stress can have a major impact on cognitive performance, so it's important to take every necessary precaution to prevent feeling stressed out on exam day.

Focus And Calm Yourself On Arrival

Finally, once you've arrived at your testing center, take a few minutes to center yourself. Do some deep breaths, drink water, review your notes, or run through a quick guided meditation.

Remember that nerves can impact performance, so be sure to prioritize your mental wellness before you head into the exam room.

What to Bring to the Exam

You've done all you can to mentally and physically prepare for your exam, but here are a few things you should not forget to pack for your CMA exam day:

- At least one form of approved identification document
- Your registration confirmation number
- A CDC-approved medical mask
- An approved calculator
- Flashcards or notes for use in the waiting room
- Ear plugs
- Any necessary prescriptions
- Water and a healthy snack

Most of your belongings will be stored in an assigned locker for the duration of the exam. If you're unsure of whether or not a certain item is permitted, ask one of the test administrators. They are there to ensure your experience is as smooth as possible.

One of the bonuses offered with the CMA Exam Academy complete review course is the opportunity to experience a real-life exam day during a Prometric Test Drive. If you have any uncertainties about what to bring or what to expect, this is a great way to have your questions answered in advance of the big day.

The CMA Exam Check-In Process

Here's an overview of what to expect when you arrive at the testing center.

Arrive 30 Minutes Early

There will be other candidates taking the test on the same day. To avoid long lines and to give yourself time to clear your mind and review your notes beforehand it's a good idea to check in early.

Review Check-In Instructions

In your registration confirmation email, you'll find an authorization number and appointment time, along with any necessary instructions.

Check-In With An Administrator

During check-in, you will be asked to present your government-issued ID and authorization number. The administrator will then sign you in and assign you to a locker.

Place All Belongings In The Locker

Only approved prescriptions, bottled water, ear plugs, eyeglasses, and calculators will be allowed in the exam room. Leave your jewelry, accessories, coat, bag, keys, phone, and wallet in the locker.

Sit In The Waiting Area

An administrator will call you when it is time to take the exam.

Prepare For An Inspection

Once you are called, you will undergo an inspection of your prescription eyewear, sleeves, pant legs, and pockets for any forgotten items that must be stored in your locker. Recording devices are strictly prohibited and staff are diligent about enforcing this rule.

Maximize Your 30-Minute Tutorial Time

A lot of people gain confidence by simply getting familiar with the Prometric testing system. Great news – you can try it out before your CMA exam begins!

The Prometric system allows a 30-minute tutorial time. You can click around, engage with the user interface, and investigate how it all works.

PRO TIP: you may not need a full 30 minutes since the software is very intuitive. However, I would NOT recommend jumping right into the exam. After all, you have the time, and you can use it however you want.

Here's what I recommend: take however long you need/want to learn the software. Then, when you're ready, use the rest of the 30 minutes to do a brain dump of every formula you can think of.

Organize them so you can easily locate what you need during the exam – creating your own formula reference sheet.

DOING THIS WILL HAVE THREE BENEFITS:

1. You'll be more comfortable and confident, which helps alleviate stress and improves cognition.
2. You'll significantly reduce the chance of your mind blanking when trying to recall a formula since you just wrote them all down.
3. You'll speed up your ability to work out problems, ensuring you'll complete the entire exam on time

30 minutes well spent can make a huge difference.

"My CMA exam success in under one year would not have been possible without Nathan + CMA Exam Academy team! I highly recommend the program to all considering the exam. The structure, study materials and test bank were key components to my success. Thank you CMA Exam Academy!"

-CARLY CHOPP, CMA

What To Do After Your CMA Exam (Don't Stress)

The waiting is the hardest part.

Whether or not you're a Tom Petty fan, this is the truth of the days after your CMA exam. As you anxiously await your CMA test score, I'd suggest you occupy yourself with a few productive tasks.

This will keep your mind off the "what if" and focused on the future... your life as a successful CMA!

After You Finish The First Exam Part

You may choose to take part 1 or part 2 of the CMA exam first. Whichever you choose, once the first test is done, I suggest that you take a break for a day or two (or a week) and then immediately start studying for the next part.

While the parts of the CMA exam cover different topics, the concepts are generally interrelated.

If you're in a good brain space and cadence for studying, you don't want to give yourself a ton of time between each part of the exam. You'll lose momentum and could lose motivation.

So, take a little break, then get back to the races and prep for the next part.

After You Finish The Second Exam Part

Once you've wrapped both parts of the CMA exam, you have a different waiting game ahead of you. The final score you get from that part will determine whether you are going to get your CMA certification.

You have an opportunity now to exercise some self-control – don't let your mind run wild with possible scenarios. Instead, get your ducks in a row for what will happen whether you pass or fail.

I strongly suggest staying positive at this juncture. You'll wait for 6 weeks, and it's not worth being wracked with anxiety about whether you got a passing score.

Go about your normal routine. Work on your professional presence, like your resume or your LinkedIn profile. Loosely plan for the contingencies of passing or failing, and be prepared for what you'll do either way.

Once you get the news about your score, whether you passed or failed will determine your next steps.

In the Meantime: Submit Education and Experience Paperwork to the IMA

One thing you can do right now (while you wait) is to take the time to collect and submit all of your education and work experience paperwork to the IMA.

Sometimes, the IMA will take some time to review and process your documentation. The sooner you get this submitted, the faster you'll be able to get your CMA certification.

» Pass or Fail, Here's What to Do...

The good news is you can really only get one of two answers: you passed the CMA or you didn't pass the CMA.

If you pass, celebrate this milestone! But your CMA journey is not finished yet. You'll continue on to finish your work experience requirements, start networking, and position yourself for new opportunities.

If you didn't pass, don't give up on your goal of becoming a CMA! You're in good company, considering that 55% of people don't pass the CMA exam on the first attempt.

If you're in that camp, you can double down and get ready to try again. The best part is you have a lot of foundational knowledge: you just didn't study quite hard enough or weren't quite prepared enough for test day.

There are plenty of ways to get it right next time, like improving your study habits, using practice tests, and taking a CMA prep course that includes personalized coaching and support.

Whether you're brushing up your resume to launch your new CMA career or buckling down to study for attempt two, I'm here to help. Drop a comment. I've worked with people in both scenarios, helping you get what you want by working hard, focusing up, and enjoying the journey.

"I can't believe I can pass both exams within a year, while working full time and living by myself in the US. (I came from China). And I am not an accounting or business major at all. Lol, thanks to CMA Exam Academy well designed online review materials, friendly and thoughtful staff coaching, useful tools, etc, I can easily pass exams and now become officially a Certified Management Accountant."

-YAN HUANG, CMA

CMA Exam Release Dates: Here's the Inside Scoop

After preparing for the CMA exam for weeks on end, you finally get the courage to book your exam appointment.

You pay the exam fee and make your way to the test center during your chosen testing window.

After taking the Certified Management Accountant exam, the last thing you want to do is wait weeks on end to receive your results.

They say patience is a virtue, but even I can attest to how difficult it is to wait for your CMA exam scores.

The amount of anticipation I felt while waiting for my results was overwhelming.

And the truth is, it actually does take quite a bit of time to get your results.

Before we dive into when you'll receive your results, below is a list of the testing windows. These are important CMA exam dates worth writing down.

Don't forget, you must pay the CMA entrance fee in order to secure your spot – you can read about this fee in our article on CMA exam cost.

OCTOBER	December 13

CMA Testing Dates Summary

The CMA exam is offered during two-month test windows three times per year. The CMA testing date windows are:

- January and February.
- May and June.
- September and October.

You can schedule your CMA exam with Prometric, the IMA testing partner.

How Long Does It Take to Receive Your Results

The date in which you take your exam during the exam window will affect when you actually receive your results. The standard length of time is approximately 42 days after the last day of the month in which you took the test.

All multiple-choice questions are graded by computers. The ICMA has an algorithm that grades each question and this portion of the exam is worth 75% of your overall score. Simply put, each answer is either correct or incorrect. There is no wiggle room with this.

In total there are 100 multiple-choice questions on the exam. What you may find interesting is that 10 of these questions are un-scored. This is the same for Part 1 and Part 2 exam MCQ sections.

The ICMA pretests new questions that they would like to introduce on future exams, but before making them official questions, they want to make sure they are actually good questions. By adding these unscored questions they can gather statistics on them and evaluate their reliability.

Unlike the MCQ section, the essay questions are a little more complex and are scored by humans. Obviously, they will need time to grade this portion of the CMA exam, and as you can imagine, this is a very labor-intensive process that takes time.

Once both sections of the exam are graded, they combine the scores of the essays with the multiple-choice questions to arrive at your final CMA exam score.

Psychometricians (essentially statisticians who are specialists at testing) grade your exam on a scale. A score of 360 is considered a passing grade, while 500 would be considered a perfect score. So it's a scientific process, and they're very confident in the reliability and validity of the scores when they do get released.
